Examining Our Fundraising Ethics... Does the End Always Justify the Means? Led by Lisa Bennett, CFRE, of The Cornerstone Group

August 17, 2007
12 Noon – 1:30 PM
Tarpy's Roadhouse

"The vast majority of the time, interests of donors, non-profits, and the community coincide perfectly, and philanthropy makes the world a better place. Once in a while, however, the balance of power (represented by money) gets out of balance. One of the parties - donor, volunteer, Board member, development staff, and executive director - may step over the line. But where, exactly, is this "line"? Entering the field from another sector, you may find that the ethics rules are subtly different here, and you could use a road map. Stay in the development field long enough, and you'll certainly encounter an ethical dilemma or two along the way.

Come to this lively discussion of some of the most commonly encountered ethical dilemmas in our not-for-profit sector. Share experiences (without naming names!) with your colleagues. See how you can benefit from tools available to you, including a practical decision-making model developed by a scholar-ethicist.
